

JOLLY BOYS VISIT TO ELY THURS. 18TH OCTOBER 2012

CULTURE

Ely is a sleepy town dominated by a magnificent cathedral which houses the impressive stain glass window museum located in the south triforium, or gallery up a narrow staircase to you and me. In 1066 Anglo -Saxon resistance to the Norman conquest centred on Ely under Hereward the Wake who caused William the Conqueror no end of trouble to the degree that he had to come to the city to quell the locals. It remained quiet until 1636 when Oliver Cromwell came to live in Ely in St. Mary's street next to the church. He stayed for ten years before leaving amid much disorder to become Lord Protector of the country. A plaque on the church wall commemorates the Littleport rioters who were hung at Ely in 1816. Since then it has gone quiet again until today.
